

PENNSYLVANIA NAMES TRAINS TO HONOR FLIER

Crack Passenger Carriers Are To Be Known as "Spirit of St. Louis"

To commemorate the New York to Paris flight of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and to perpetuate the name of his sister monoplane, the Pennsylvania Railroad has changed the name of two of its famous trains between St. Louis and New York.

"The St. Louisan," westbound train, and "The New Yorker," eastbound train, are now known as railroad circles as "The Spirit of St. Louis." The observation car on the new "Spirit of St. Louis" has been named Colonel Lindbergh in honor of America's daring flier.

For nearly 20 years, running every day, "The St. Louisan" and "The New Yorker" have speeded over the broad steel highway that links together the business and social life of Gotham on the Atlantic seaboard, with the Great Southwest.

In this way the Pennsylvania Railroad wishes to make its contribution to the perpetuation to the memory of Charles Lindbergh and the new chapter he has written in the history of transportation.

Excursions Announced
A Big Four excursion to Niagara Falls and other points in New York was announced at the Union Station today to take place July 16, 20 and Aug. 26.

The excursions will be held on the 16-day plan and will be run to Clayton, Lake Placid, Malone, Saranac and Tupper Lake Junction, N. Y., and Virginia.

Beach in addition to Niagara Falls.

Record Run Made

The former record for fast runs between New York and Washington was smashed recently when the Pennsylvania special train chartered by the International News Reel to carry motion pictures of the reception of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh at Washington carried the reels to the metropolis, a distance of 224 miles in three hours and seven minutes.

The former high mark was set by the Pennsylvania on March 5, 1925 at the inauguration of President Coolidge when the run was made in three hours and 40 minutes. The regular scheduled running time between the two cities is five hours.

Special Train

The special train of five coaches, bearing nearly 300 Eagles of Marion and Marion County, left at 6 o'clock this morning for Youngstown to attend the annual state Eagles convention at that city.

The train was scheduled to arrive in this city at 10 o'clock this morning. The return trip will be made starting at 10 o'clock tonight and will arrive in Marion about 2 o'clock, Thursday.

Two Specials

Two special trains carrying nearly 1,800 workers of the Beaver Valley Industries at Monaca, Pa., passed over the Erie Railroad on the way to Akron when the annual outing of the workers will be held. Both of the trains consisted of 12 coaches each.

EIGHT SUITS TO COLLECT BACK TAXES FILED

All but One Case Scheduled for Hearing June 28; Other Set for July 5

The battle being waged by County Treasurer James E. Messenger against those who have failed to pay their personal case was given impetus yesterday afternoon when eight additional cases were filed in the municipal court. All of the cases with the exception of that brought against W. Peoples, 100 McWilliamet, will be heard on June 28. The case against Peoples in which a judgment of $124.42 is asked, will be heard on July 5.

Settlements on the part of the defendants have prevented any of the cases yet filled in come up for hearing. The cases of Ella Chapman, in which judgment for $12.45 was asked, H. B. Creekbaum, who was being sued for $58.94 and James E. Snyder who was made defendant in a suit to collect $13.82, all of which were set down for hearing yesterday, were taken from the docket, when settlement was made by the defendants.

Costs Added

In addition to the original amount of the taxes, each defendant is required to pay $4.10 costs. The cost is added immediately upon the filing of the petition.

The suits started by County Treasurer Messenger yesterday name the following as defendants: J. B. Reid, N. Main, for the years from 1917 to 1925; Joe Farrugini, 150 S. State-st., $25.95 for taxes due for the years from 1914 to 1919; Frank Wingo, 282 Seneca-st., $3.26 for the year 1919; J. W. Peoples 100 McWilliamet, $152.40 for the year 1925; W. N. Hatch, 742 Kentucky-st., $23.44 from 1914 to 1922; W. T. Witford, 644 E. Church-st., $38.95 from 1919 to 1923; E. P. Maloney, 227 Chestnut-st., $10.07 for the year 1921; and Thomas H. Howell, 406 Foster Lane, $58.93 from 1919 to 1925.

MANSFIELD OUT OF LUCK

Washington, June 23—Mansfield, Ohio, is not likely to realize its ambition to become a stopover on the proposed Cleveland-Louisville air mail route, according to a letter received by Sen. Frank B. PREPARING COLUMBIA-ST FOR RESURFACING WORK

Uncapher & Gillespie in Charge; Street Corners Will Be Cut Back

Work of getting Columbia-st in readiness for the resurfacing with asphalt, has been started by Uncapher & Gillespie of this city. Sewage connections are being made and new catch basins installed. The corners at all street intersections will also be cut from a four-foot radius to a radius of approximately 20 feet. This will make automobile traffic much easier at these points and will also lessen the danger of accidents. The catch basins which are now being installed are of a new type which promises relief from the danger of becoming stopped up with each heavy rain. In addition to using 10-inch tile with cement joints, in place of the five and six inch red tile without joints, which has been the custom the basins will be installed from eight to 10 feet from the street intersection instead of from the corner, thereby avoiding some of the flow of mud.

at the corner, thereby avoiding some of the flow of mud.

Brick-lined Well

The basin is equipped with a brick lined well three feet square and resting two feet below the tile which is designated to carry off the water. This well will act as a catch basin for all mud and rubbish and will prevent the closing up of the sewer by the accumulation of mud.

Some of the tile leading from the catchbasins, when taken up yesterday, were found to be nearly completely closed with mud and the roots of trees. Open joints are partly responsible for this condition, contractors say.

WOMAN PARK DIRECTOR

Bellefontaine, June 22—Mrs. Iva D. Roberts recently appointed superintendent of parks here, is said to be the only woman occupying this position in Ohio. She was named to the position following the death of her husband who held the position for many years.

What Destroys Paving and How Brick Resists It

Weather and traffic wear destroy pavements not specifically designed to resist them. Unless by their very nature waterproof, pavement surfaces absorb moisture or let it enter through tiny cracks, caused by changing atmospheric conditions. There, freezing and expanding, water increases the damage. Traffic pounding soon finishes the destruction.

Paving brick being vitrified is unchanging. It can't soften under heat; tire chains cannot injure it; it cannot absorb water. Bound with asphalt, water can't get through the surface either. Laid with a resilient sand cushion, brick makes a surface that fully protects the base from traffic shocks. Man does not make a tougher, denser, more utterly durable paving material.

Engineers will confirm these facts. Records will show that brick makes the cheapest of all pavements for roads or streets.

"The A. B. C. of Good Paving," a taxpayer's manual, tells in words and pictures how engineers today build over-wearing, low cost, brick surfaced roads and streets. Address your request to National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association, 332 South Michigan Boulevard, Chicago.

Delinquent Tax Collection Here Much Harder Than in Other Counties, Man Claims

About 500 of 3,151 Persons to Whom Notices Were Sent by Collector Have Settled Accounts, Records Show; Many Suits Are Anticipated

Collection of delinquent personal taxes in Marion County is much slower and more difficult than in other counties where he has handled similar work, C. R. Randles, of Columbus, stated today in commenting upon progress made since he began work as collector here several weeks ago under contract with the commissioners and County Treasurer J. E. Messinger.

Randles has mailed out notices to 3,151 persons charged with delinquencies and only about 500 have responded by settling the accounts, most of which were for small amounts, the collector stated.

Records Elsewhere
In other counties where Randles has had charge of delinquent collections, the percentage of payments has been considerably in excess of the record here at this time, he says.

There are also prospects of an unusually large number of court suits being necessary here to clean up the delinquencies, whereas in other counties comparatively few suits were required. Prior to starting the work here, Randles had charge of collections in Licking and Muskingum counties.

Up to date, 15 suits have been started by Randles, 14 in municipal court and one in the court of common pleas. There are indications that a large number of additional suits will be filed.

Because of this situation it is likely that the collection will run considerably longer than was anticipated at the outset, Randles says. He had hoped to wind it up before the close of the regular June tax collections but the prospects now are that this will be impossible.

Explains Situation
"I am using every means possible to collect the delinquencies without going into court in order that the taxpayers may not be required to pay extra costs," Randles states. "Where those charged with delinquencies declare absolutely that they will not pay and are unable to furnish evidence that they do not owe the amounts charged to them, however, court action is the only course left for me to follow."

Delinquencies listed on the books turned over to Randles total more than $400,000 and extend from 1907 up to the last tax year. This period is considerably longer than the time covered by delinquencies in other counties where Randles has worked, which is partly the reason for the task here being unusually difficult and complicated, he states.

Largest Item
Most of the delinquent items are for comparatively small amounts, the largest being charged against the defunct Studebaker-Wulf Rubber Co., now being liquidated in bankruptcy court.

Three years' personal property taxes totalling approximately $12,000 are charged against this company. Property valuations listed for taxation by former officials of the company were excessive, it is alleged, and adjustments will probably be made in effecting a settlement with the referee in bankruptcy. Efforts to bring about this adjustment are now being made by Randles and the bankruptcy court.

Reaps Big Profit

Not less than $250,000 is the amount estimated as the share of Al Johnson, above, famous comedian, in the gross receipts from "Big Boy," stage play, during the present season. The total gross of the show, $1,419,000, is believed to be the largest ever secured by a stage attraction in a single season, in the United States, playing the road only. The comedian receives a salary of $5,500 a week, plus 50 per cent of the net profit, it is said.

meeting held at the Marion County Club last night.

The board adopted a resolution expressing its pleasure and approval and ordered a copy sent to Governor Donahoe. A paragraph in the resolution reads as follows:

"We congratulate the real estate men of Ohio that the services of a man of Mr. Jacoby's ability and understanding of license laws have been secured for this important position."

Announcement of the appointments by the governor made clear that the law is not to be administered to restrict the number of persons engaging in the sale of real estate.

"The director of commerce," it was announced, "is made ex-officio secretary of the board and will be the administrative officer."

"The department of commerce will adopt a policy in administering the law that will not prevent any honest man from engaging in the real estate business."

Six grounds for complaint on which a license may be revoked are specified in the act, as follows:

1. Knowingly misrepresenting.

2. False promises with intent to influence.

3. Plagiarism misrepresentation through advertising or promises by salesmen.

4. Acting for more than one party to a transaction without knowledge or consent of all parties.

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR TWO MORE LIQUOR CASES

Appeal in Each Instance Based on Ruling of Highest Tribunal

Columbus, June 22—Decision to hear appeals in two more cases challenging the constitutionality of Ohio dry laws was announced today by the Ohio Supreme Court.

These two suits are those of M. J. Dugan, Greene County, and of Sam Turi, Cuyahoga County, against the state. Both men were convicted on charges of illegal possession of liquor. Dugan was tried in the mayor's court at Xenia and Turi by Justice of the Peace R. S. Rutledge, Rocky River.

Counsel for both men, basing their argument upon a decree issued by the United States Supreme Court early this year in the Turi case, claimed that the provisions of the Crable dry laws which authorize village mayors and justices of the peace to conduct liquor cases are unconstitutional because the trial judge has a pecuniary interest in the outcome of the case, due to the fact that his compensation is derived from fines assessed persons found guilty of such charges.

About four other similar cases are pending in the supreme court. Decision on not expected before next fall in view of the fact that the supreme court judges are now on their summer recess.

HERE'S MORE ABOUT GENEVA PARLEY STARTS ON PAGE 1

British and Japanese programs at Geneva. The British program of "linking" with the Washington treaty and lowering the tonnage and armament of cruisers would relegate the American navy to a position of decided inferiority, while the Japanese proposal of a naval building holiday would leave the United States in third position among the navies of the world as far as cruisers are concerned.

The "big navy" contingent in congress has never recovered from its disappointment over the fact that the United States sacrificed naval superiority at Washington six years ago for parity with Great Britain. For the British now to endeavor at Geneva to wreck that parity and push the United States still further down the naval ladder is keenly resented by the "big navy" group in congress.

The Harding Administration had difficulty in pushing the Washington treaty through the senate, notwithstanding the overwhelming Republican majority in the senate at the time. Oscar Underwood, was one of the chief American delegates. Most of the Democrats deserted Underwood in that contest and voted against ratification.

With that fact still fresh in Democratic memories, and with the 1928 presidential campaign approaching, it is certain that any treaty emerging from the bickering at Geneva will receive careful scrutiny from the left side of the chamber. Republican spokesmen agreed that it would be "suicidal" from a party standpoint for the administration to present any treaty to the senate that would give the Democrats an opportunity to make a naval issue in 1928.

Control Questionable Furthermore, control of the seventh senate is a matter of considerable uncertainty. The Republicans have a paper majority of one vote, but potential control, if not actual control, is vested in the Democrats and a handful of Republican insurgents. Much depends upon the outcome of the Smith and Cato contest, but the Democrats are militantly confident of their ability to control the senate on any given occasion.

Consequently from the political standpoint alone, it will be necessary for America's delegates at Geneva to come back with a treaty satisfactory to both sides of the senate chamber—or empty-handed. The only theory that will be satisfactory is one that provides for a continuation of naval equality between the United States and Great Britain. Failing in that, the belief prevails here that the American delegation, on instruction from Washington, will return empty-handed.

Action on the petition will follow. Should the improvement be granted it is not likely that construction will be started until next year.

 Daily Proverb—"Hypocrisy is a sort of homage that vice pays to virtue."
 Being tender-hearted and sympathetic, we naturally hope that Summer brought her heavy ones along.
 It now develops that Lindbergh has always owned a dog. We guess he's a regular fellow all the way through.
 Naturally, we wait with some suspense the reaction of the Episcopal church to the peculiar views on matrimony expressed by Rev. Mr. Lewis.
 Here summer is with us once more, and we haven't as yet this year heard a single, solitary squeak from a front-porch swing.
 There must be something in that kidnapping scare. We would hate to think that either Doug or Mary felt they needed the publicity.
 Wouldn't it add to the hilarity a bit should it develop that that famous Lindbergh letter of introduction was written by the mayor of St. Louis?
 "Dry Officials Start Campaign To Stop Liquor." Reads a headline over a Washington story. How the dry officials love to tell the old, old story!

We do not desire to pose as a croaker, but from the bottom of our heart we wish Lindbergh would keep in mind the case of the Minnewatan who fell six stories and escaped serious injury only to trip over a raised brick in a pavement later on and break his neck.

There's absolutely no way of telling the "assault, imported Swiss cheese" made here in Ohio from the real thing. Even the prices are the same.

Quite often in this grand old life of ours there are different paths to the same goal. We note a statement to the effect that the government has saved $4,298,448 in the last four years by paying its bills promptly and we know a lot of people who save money by never paying their bills at all.

"Who knows?" Mr. Coolidge may have shed the White House spokesman rather than pay his transportation all the way out to the Black Hills and back.

There must be times when Colonel William Mitchell is inclined to feel that this is a bitterly cold, cruel world. The public seems absolutely disinclined to take cognizance of his present attempt to break into the spotlight. And what more utterly heart-breaking to a seeker after publicity than public indifference?

Assets May Become Liabilities.
 When pointing out in Monday's Star that the traffic signals at street intersections in the uptown business section were designed primarily for the protection of pedestrians and that motorists are not expected to start their cars when the yellow change signal shows, but should wait for the word "Go," President Whysall, of the Marion Auto club, might have gone further and called the attention of violators of the code to the fact that, signal or no signal, the pedestrian has just as much legal right to cross the street as the motorist has to drive along its length. The installation of traffic lights takes away no right from the pedestrian nor does it give any added right to the motorist.

A week or such a matter ago a case in point came before the court of appeals of Hamilton county. It was held in the court below that the plaintiff, a woman who had been run down and injured, was guilty of contributory negligence because she did not look to see if any vehicle was approaching. The court of appeals absolutely refused to consider such a plea. Its decision upon this point reads:

"Under the charge as given in the case at bar the jury could not have done otherwise than find for the defendant, as the right of the pedestrian to cross the street, if there was a vehicle in sight, was practically eliminated. Such a rule of law in this age of congested traffic on our streets would practically prohibit the crossing of a street by a pedestrian, save and except at his or her sole risk, if there was an approaching motor vehicle within the range of vision."

The court below was reversed and the matter remanded for a new trial.

While we believe it may be said that the majority of local motorists stop for the red "Stop" sign, it is likewise probable that a majority of them do not wait for the green "Go" sign but start on the yellow "Change" sign and it is a very common practice for motorists to try to "rush" the traffic signal when the "Change" sign shows, hoping to get past the signal before the "Stop" sign shows.

Thus, as pointed out by Mr. Whysall, is the greatest menace the pedestrian has to face. If this practice is to continue, if the police authorities continue to remain supine so far as enforcing the traffic laws in this respect is concerned, Mr. Whysall is absolutely right in holding that the traffic signals had far better be junked. With repeated violations of this provision of the traffic code going unpunished, the signals are no protection rather than assets.

The Case of Miss Whitney.

A pardon was granted to Miss Anita Whitney, convicted of criminal syndicalism and sentenced to serve from one to fourteen years in San Quentin prison, by Governor C. C. Young, of California, Tuesday.

"To condemn her at sixty years of age to a felon's cell is unthinkable. Whatever may be thought of the folly of her, misdirected sympathies, her lifelong friendship for the unfortunate is ample proof that she is not a criminal in any sense of the word," the governor said in issuing the pardon.

Criminal syndicalism is defined by the California law as "any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage or unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing changes in industrial ownership and control or affecting any political change."

In a word, the California law, which is very much like that of Kansas, holds that any person or organization, or one belonging to any organization formed to teach, advocate, aid or abet criminal syndicalism is guilty of a felony.

It was not claimed that Miss Whitney had committed any act of violence, but there is no question but what she taught and advocated communism and acts of violence and thus aided and abetted criminal syndicalism. She was found guilty and the case was carried through the various courts to the supreme court of the United States, which, seven years after the commission of her crime, upheld the anti-syndicalism laws of both California and Kansas and affirmed the judgments of the various California courts.

The federal supreme court, while upholding the fundamental principles of American government and free speech under majority rule as an essential means of its existence, made plain that "the rights of free speech, a free press and free assembly do not extend to anihilationist processes or use of force in making fundamental changes in our form of government or industry;" that free speech "does not mean that incendiary minds can start fires with impunity, whether by the torch or less direct, but even more dangerous, means."

The law against criminal syndicalism was intended to restrict both those who openly advocate and practice the doctrines of destruction, and those who lend their influence to such movements, and the federal supreme court set its seal of approval upon the very letter of the law.

Miss Whitney's was a test case. The legislature of California enacted a law declaring certain acts or utterances to constitute a crime. She was tried under the law and convicted. There can be no question as to her guilt. She has violated the law by utterance since her conviction. The case was carried through the various courts to the nation's highest judicial tribunal, which held the law under which she was tried to be constitutional. The courts held her guilty, but the California governor, under an avalanche of letters appealing for a review of her case or clemency for her, holds that she is not guilty, stating that "to condemn her at sixty years of age would be unthinkable." As a matter of fact, she was not condemned at sixty years of age, but seven years ago at fifty-three.

We have no personal prejudice against Miss Whitney, but we admit that we have some prejudice against a governor who sets himself above all the courts in the land as to what constitutes a felony. Laws should be enforced. If a law is an unjust law, it should be repealed, but so long as it is the law, it should be enforced. If criminals are to be pardoned by governors before they even start upon the serving of the sentences imposed upon them, all laws may just as well be wiped off the statute book and the courts shut up shop. We can appreciate the governor's feeling toward and sympathy for Miss Whitney, but we cannot appreciate the feeling he must have for the law-abiding people of the state whose lives and property are endangered by the course he has taken.

These repeated demands upon the part of Senator Harrison for free speech in the senate makes us wonder what Patton imagines he has been doing ever since he acquired his seat.

"Ever since the ultra short skirts have been in vogue," observed the restaurant philosopher at luncheon today, "I've paid tribute to whoever it was who penned the line 'about ignorance being bliss.' He must have been inspired."

Mrs. Lindbergh, after checking up the recently-published life of her son, says it is eighty per cent bunk. If it's twenty per cent correct she may feel assured that another record has been shattered. That's ten per cent to the good over the usual life stuff about people in the public eye.

An Oklahoman has been locked up in a police station, charged with having six affairs of the heart simultaneously. It seems to us he should have been taken, rather, to some institution for mental defectives.

Miami has just experienced a two-inch rainfall, which broke a six-week drought. The delight manifested by the city is proof that it wasn't accompanied by one of those gentle Florida sephyras which land vessels in the streets of coast towns and blow down hotels and business blocks.

Poems That Live.

FEAR NO MORE

Fear no more the heat of the sun,
 Nor the furious winter's rage;
 Thou the world's task hast done,
 Home art gone, and taken thy wages:
 Golden lads and girls all must,
 As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.
 Fear no more the frown of the great,
 Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
 Care no more to clothe and eat;
 To thee the reed is as the oak;
 The scepter, learning, physic must
 All follow this and come to dust.
 Fear no more the lightning flash,
 Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
 Fear not slander, censure rash;
 Thou hast finished joy and morn;
 All lovers young, all lovers must,
 Consign to thee, and come to dust.
 —William Shakespeare.

THE TAXPAYER: "WHAT'S THE USE? AS FAST AS UNCLE SAM PULLS THE 'TAX' OUT THE OTHER FELLOWS PUT THEM IN."

Infants' Habits Affect Health.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"Knowing your great interest in that most fascinating subject, children, I would very much appreciate your writing an article about the children's sleep—the hours that children of different ages should sleep, etc." This is a quotation from a letter I have received from "A Faithful Reader."

This good mother has a child three and a half years old who refuses to take a nap during the day. He stays awake thirteen hours, sleeping only eleven hours at the most. The mother speaks of the child as being very nervous and irritable.

The amount of sleep a child requires depends upon its age. A newborn baby sleeps almost all the time. It will have not more than two or three hours of wakefulness out of the twenty-four. Except for the time it is nursing it will be asleep.

As the child grows older the amount of sleep required is much less. As it reaches the age of five or six years it will resist every effort to coax it into a nap. A child of the age mentioned by the mother who has written me should take a nap after the noonday meal. By this time the infant will be worn out by the activities of the forenoon. He has played so hard he will be ready for sleep.

You know that all the animals like to lie down and take a nap after eating. When the blood is busy in the stomach performing its work of digestion the brain is less stimulated and a desire to sleep is natural.

No matter what the age of the child may be, anything which excites him in the least will drive away sleep. If you are going to play with the baby, do so at some other time rather than just before the nap is due. Then there will be nothing to excite the child and prevent sleep.

I do not believe in walking the floor with an infant nor fussing over it. The baby should be put in his bed and left there. The more attention he is given the less likely he is to sleep. If he needs the mother going about her affairs and ignoring him, he is very likely to fall into slumber.

Habit is everything, even with a little baby. You will be surprised at what a tender age they can form bad habits. If the mother walks the baby about two or three times, the youngster will scream for attention if the walking is neglected. Handling the baby and rocking the baby and fussing with the baby may be very pleasant for the mother, but it creates a habit that will cause the mother much unnecessary trouble. If the doing relatives will leave the youngster alone, and the mother will be content to put it in its crib and leave it, it won't be long until the child discovers that it has nothing to do but take its nap.

No matter what the age of the child may be, sleeplessness is very often due to some form of indigestion. Bad feeding is responsible for most of the baby's troubles. Colic, even if it is very slight.

At all ages—in the infancy and early childhood, and constipation are the most frequent causes for sleeplessness.

Editorial Comment.

ARMENIAN INGRATITUDE.

Various Armenian colonies in America are taking rather violent exception to the announced intention of the United States to resume diplomatic relations with Turkey. Armenians living in Detroit recently adopted a set of resolutions protesting the action. Their countrymen in New York City have followed suit, but they go further than merely to express opposition. They even make demands.

These American Armenians characterize the action of the state department in arranging what the international lawyers call a modus vivendi with Turkey along the lines of the Lausanne treaty which the senate rejected some years ago as a conspiracy with Turkish agents. They insist that it constitutes a betrayal of the Armenian Christians. They demand that Mouskhar Bey, whom Turkey proposes to send here as ambassador, be denied admittance as an undesirable alien.

The extreme language of the resolutions and the violent attitude they reflect are enough to insure that they will get short shrift in official circles. If indeed they are ever recognized there. All the world knows what the United States and its people have done and have tried to do for the Armenian people. Their record in their behalf is too obvious to lend any credence to the hot-headed charges now made against this friendly nation. Those Armenians resident among us should realize that the very resumption of relations with Turkey may put us in a position to be of still further assistance to the Armenians. The disappointment of the Armenians who hate Turkey with a bitter hatred can be understood, but their baseless and obviously silly charges against the United States are not so easily explained. Time will show the wisdom of the course that has been decided on.—Ohio State Journal.

SUBVERSIVE TEACHERS.
 It is a pleasure to note the clean-cut criticisms of certain teachers and professors indulged in by Colonel W. M. Mumm of Columbus, of the United States army, delivered before the Cincinnati chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Ft. Mitchell on Flag day.

Colonel Mumm emphasized facts in connection with Russian communistic menace often discussed in these columns—the subversive doctrines and teachings originating in Moscow and proclaimed from so many American pulpits and elsewhere. He particularly stressed the incomprehensible paradox of a Christian ministry advocating the political and social theories of the national leaders of Russia, who by proclamation of legal edict have banished God and all organized religion from the Bolshevik formula, together with marriage as a sacrament and the family as a divine institution.

It is indeed an emasculated Americanism and an emasculated spiritualism which can applaud and uphold the doctrines of Moscow, where within a few days past the Red reign of terror has been revived and exercised in the murder of scores of individuals whose only crime was that they dared refuse to believe in the tenets of the new faith of subversive materialism.

Another statement made by Colonel Mumm was most pertinent. He asserted that American extreme pacifism should refuse to enjoy the fruits of war so long as they refuse to accept its responsibilities. But this they will not do. Their lot under the protecting folds of "Old Glory" is much too easy for them to demonstrate the courage of their convictions and seek delectable harbor under the red flag of Communism, in Russia, where they belong.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DANGERS OF GOLF.

Golf is the third most dangerous sport so far as accident frequency is concerned, according to a report just made public by a large insurance company. Only baseball and hunting surpass it in danger to the participant. Last year, for instance, this company paid out about $4,500,000 for injuries sustained in some 33,000 accidents. Baseball showed a total of 1,000 accidents, "in country or woods" totaled 571. Golf was responsible for 451 accidents, for which the company paid out nearly $62,000.

"Struck by lightning" was not an uncommon accident, according to the report. "Foreign particle in the eye" took a toll of six followers of the sport of St. Andrew. Splinters, bites by insects, collisions with inanimate objects and poisons from shrubs contributed their share of mishaps, but the most common accident was slipping or falling on uneven ground. Even the nineteenth hole was no haven of refuge, for twelve individuals were "cut on sharp instruments" subsequently identified as "bottles."

Another tradition, that regarding the danger of football, is thus upset. What is the golfer to do? Shall he put aside his putter and stick, and retire to the comparative security of his home hearth? Maybe he should but it is certain that he will not. Once he golf bug bites, incursions of any sort are of no use whatsoever. Knowledge that danger lurks behind each tee will not keep the golfer from his sport. It may even be that the danger adds to the zest of the game and that in the peril lies the fascination.—Washington Post.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Much talk these days about liberal education. To have a liberal education is to be able to appraise and judge with some accuracy the events of the day. To do that one has to know history, to know what men have already done through. We can not judge the events of the present events until we are familiar with the effect of similar events in the past. There can be no liberal education without familiarity with history.

About 40,000 girls disappear from their homes in the United States every year. Thousands of boys leave for no apparent reason—but there is a reason. Adults have to put a lot of concentration on the question of what home ought to be like, if they are going to make it the right place for young folks. Young folks want freedom. It's their nature to want freedom. Much of that freedom ought to be found in the home. Do you remember the lines of Riley:

"O what did the little boy
 'at nobody wanted him to?
 Did he do for a Central park was sold in An' 'whoop an' holler an' bang his gun.
 An' bust fire-crackers, an' let 'em have fun,
 An' 'ats all the little boy done."

The new tendency is for newspapers to be more than newspapers. It is a good tendency. More and more the managements of modern newspapers are striving to build up and emphasize the service element. Departments are started not just as circulation boosters or for entertainment, but because such departments will put the newspapers in touch with a larger number of people who need help, who want service.

The old day of personal journalism is done. The new day of community-service journalism has come.

Dean Swift used to say that the true gentleman is he who gives the least offense to any member of the company. At a certain social affair a college lad handed his plate, containing the remnants of food, to a multi-millionaire. The rich man didn't throw the plate in the boy's face. He did not make a cutting remark. He just took the plate and carried it away. That saved the boy from humiliation and bridged the situation.

The rich man was a gentleman indeed. Manners are deep. They come from both the mind and the heart.—Copyright, 1927.

Twenty Years Ago.

This day was Saturday.
 A beautiful statue to the memory of the late Thomas F. Bayard was unveiled in Wilmington, Delaware. Bayard was secretary of state under President Grover Cleveland and the first ambassador sent by the United States to a foreign country.

Twelve-year-old Pearl Johnson, residing a short distance south of Gurley, was bitten by a large rattlesnake while pulling weeds in a potato patch. The wound was cauterized and the lad given a large quantity of whiskey.

Mrs. Rosina Ade, seventy-five, died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. George Kalmack, of Cherry street.

Charles E. Thomas died as the result of injuries sustained at the Norris and Christian Stone and Lime company plant a week before the immediately preceding Friday.

Marriage licenses were issued to Alexander Mago and Mary George.

A horse belonging to Ernest Anderson, of Green Camp, jumped through one of the show windows of the F. M. Kirby store on west Center street, the broken glass cutting its throat and causing its death.

Burk pitched for Marion, the Drummers scoring four runs and hitting New Castle. Ted's average dropped to .373, but he still led the O-P stickers.

Miss Beldine Millor gave a shower at her home on south Main street for Miss Alice Concklin, who was to be married the following Tuesday.

Irene Elisabeth, the thirty-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ruth, residing south of Claridon, was so badly scalded by the contents of a bucket of boiling water which was upset that she died the following day.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYER.

New York, June 22.—Manhattan has always been a fertile spot for the laborer. A hundred and one cut leaders have been in attendance at the events of the day. To do that one has to know history, to know what men have already done through. We can not judge the events of the present events until we are familiar with the effect of similar events in the past. There can be no liberal education without familiarity with history.

There are more than a score of puff magazines, without circulation, which subsist by doing out flattering writs to Wall Street brokers and near celebrities. They haven't even second class mail privilege, but their incomes are startling.

One of their agents called the other day. He simulated a clerical manner. His complexion was the damp white of a toadstool and his hair the cold mold of an oyster. I had been selected by the "board of directors" for a leading article.

It was his job to secure my order for the extra copies at fifty cents a copy to mail to friends. He revealed a surprising list of those who had fallen for such sucker bait. There is a record of Brooklyn bridge being sold twice. And to New Yorkers.

The obelisk in Central park was sold in 11 lots for $50 first payment down. Sale of the Woolworth building was frustrated on a Broadway cafe because a detective overheard the conversation. A half dozen fake jewelry sales prosper in the Times Square section.

There is a certain store on Sixth avenue which has been running a continuous "fire sale" for six years. Fortune-tellers, crystal-gazers and other sundry charlatans have an entire district of their own near the heart of the city.

"Montana" diamonds—as big as your eye—are sold by the quart along the curbs in heavy traffic centers. Witch doctors flourish on the East side. Indeed hocus pocus for the gullible is everywhere. There is even a lightning rod agent with an office in a Forty-Second street building.

There is something fascinating to me about a glib faker. He seems to radiate good humor and to have such a corking time. He is a grayhound or liner gambler. For instance, who is on every ship. He is the affable passenger who tucks robes about the old women in the deck chairs and plays deck games with the children.

What I know about painting and sculpturing is a trifle less than zero, but I am finding myself at home as one of the many invited guests at private exhibitions. I have acquired a formula that seems invariably to gloss over my ignorance. "Capital!" And at a painting I venture: "What warmth of feeling!" At one exhibit recently a weird Cubistic atrocity was shown. A shrewd lady behind me observed: "There's a painter who expresses what he thinks."

Polite squealing note: A certain novelist carries a monocle in public. When a lady gazes at him through a lorgnette, he raises his monocle. Rooky—doo.

There is a sort of deadly, poisonous look about these dowagers barricaded behind diamonds who gaze loftily at the stranger through lorgnettes. Russia was filled with languid, lorgnetted ladies before the debacle.

The monocle gives a different impression. It makes a gentleman appear swank, but stupid.

The drama has taken such a mighty wallop at the past season that the recruiting officers around town look lonelier than ever.—Copyright, 1927.

Elmer A. Sperry was born at Cortland, New York, October 12, 1860. He has been president of the Sperry Gyroscope company, Brooklyn, since 1910, manufacturing his own inventions. He is the inventor of the gyro compass, airplane and ship stabilizers, gyro compound instruments, combustion engine, fire control apparatus and numerous special devices, principally for the United States navy. Sperry holds more than 400 patents issued in the United States and Europe. He has received numerous awards for his inventions and is the author of numerous papers and addresses.

Sperry holds a light engine and the development of a heavy oil suitable for aeroplanes necessary to successful transatlantic aviation. He explains the situation thus: "It will be remembered that the Atlantic air service across the ocean can begin this is because of the danger of fire."

"The answer to this hazard is very simple. We will have to get a fire extinguisher and the extinguisher exists in the form of the heavy black oil that is used in Diesel engines. This oil will put out a bonfire when thrown on it."

"England is alive to the situation and is spending $2,000,000 in the development of an engine capable of using heavy oil. The light engine is going to stand right where it is and we are developing this light engine. We will develop that engine commercial aviation is going to take on a great boom."

"The air is an ocean fifty-fifty miles deep and the aeroplane is like a submarine at the bottom of it."

"It is an ocean that drifts and the aviator needs instruments to tell how much he is drifting. Lindbergh knew he had to guard against drifting and before he left on his flight he was shown how to study his instruments. I showed him instructions and he arrived off the Irish coast he was within three miles of the point he had marked out."

Conversation overheard in a street car:
 "What a prize fighter that guy Tunney is. He is getting $7,000 a week in payduelle."
 "Yes," answered the other, "and what do you think? I hear he's going over to England to meet Shaw."
 "Aw, he'll have no trouble putting away that guy. Take anything against his staying two rounds with the champion."

"You look foolish," said the friend.
 "Think so?"
 "Are you talk silly?"
 "Are you sure?"
 "Of course. You are beginning to act like a moron."

"Don't weaken in your opinion. I feel a temptation to commit a crime and I want the alienists on my side."

"The world is round, isn't it?"
 "Right-o."
 "Then if I wanted to go east, I could eventually get there by going west."</

STRAW LOSES SUIT AGAINST MAN AND WIFE

Judge Scofield Finds in Favor of Mr. and Mrs. J. W.
Leatherman

Artemus Straw, 53-year-old Bowling Green Township farmer, lost his suit against J. W. Leatherman and wife, Vesta Leatherman, in the court of common pleas, yesterday, when Judge Scofield decided in favor of the defendants following a brief hearing of the case.
The verdict was handed down by Judge Scofield after he had heard the testimony of Straw and Mr. and Mrs.
Leatherman. He stated that no further testimony was necessary and witnesses who had been summoned in behalf of the defendants were not called to the stand.

Based on Contract
Straw's suit was based upon a contract entered into in January, 1925, in which he deeded 51 acres of land to Bowling Green Township to Mr. and Mrs. Leatherman. As part consideration the Leathermans gave their note for $2,000. In his petition, Straw alleged that Mr. and Mrs. Leatherman had taken advantage of his extreme age and by undue influence and threats had gained possession of the note without making payment.
On the witness stand, Straw testified that no threats had been made and he furnished no evidence to support his claim that the note had been transferred to the Leathermans as the result of any questionable tactics on their part, the court held.
Mr. and Mrs. Leatherman testified that they had paid the note in full by paying $1,700 in cash and making up the balance by turning over livestock to Straw.
Costs of the case were assessed against the plaintiff.
Carlhart & Warner represented
Straw in the hearing and John H.
Clark was counsel for the defendants.

NEGLECT OF GUARDS IS BLAMED BY WARDEN

"Hard-Boiled" Squad's Attempt To Escape from Ohio
Pen Nipped

Columbus, June 22—A shifting of blame, blamed by Warden F. E.
Thomas in connection with a near-break by prisoners of the "hard-boiled" squad at Ohio Penitentiary, was under way today, as prison officials conducted an investigation.
The plot by incorrigible prisoners confined in a special tier of cells in the old section of the prison was revealed when it was discovered that the men had dug tunnels leading to the outside prison yard, from where they hoped to escape over the walls by using a rope made from clothing and bed clothes, which was in readiness.
Included in the tier of cells involved were those housing many of the prisoners who participated in the break.

"My trouble started about two years ago with pains in my back," said Mr.
Fatzler. "I was told I had kidney trouble and kept on trying all kinds of medicine, but never could find anything to help me. I was getting worse and finally developed rheumatism. I could hardly bend my knees, and the pains across my hips made it impossible for me to walk at all for several days at a time.
Owing to weak kidneys, I had to get out of bed 4 or 5 times a night and felt so weak and sore in the morning that it took all my strength to dress myself."
"Now, all of these things have changed. Konjola caused me to drive the poisons from my system which were causing these pains and pains the past two years. My kidneys are in good condition now, and I never suffer from rheumatism. I can walk on leaves and my back gives me no trouble and nothing else."

Marion County Road Work Moving Forward Favorably After Getting Late Start

Unfavorable Weather Conditions Delay Program Outlined for This Year by Surveyor Cecil R. Leavens; Repairs
Being Pushed by Force

After getting an unusually late start because of unfavorable weather conditions which prevailed during the spring months, road improvement and repair work now under way in practically all parts of Marion County with prospects of steady progress during the next few months.

This is a summary of the road work schedule as outlined today by County Surveyor C. R. Leavens, who is general supervisor of the construction and repair projects.
Under ordinary conditions in former years, it has been the custom to map out the schedule by completing road work in one section of the county at a time. Because of the weather having delayed conditions this year, it has been necessary to change the plan of re-tting the work under way in practically all parts of the county. The surveyor says that this course was decided upon in order that completion of the entire program may be assured before unfavorable weather halts operations in the fall.

Repair Force
A force of approximately 25 men is now employed in the repair work, about 10 more than the usual number in former years.
These workmen include only those employed by the county. In addition a large number of men are in the employ of contractors constructing new roads.
Following is a summary of the road situation as outlined in information obtained today from the surveyor:
Covering material to be used in surface treatment of the county's 81 miles of improved highways has been distributed to the various sections since last November, when 12 prisoners shot and climbed their way outside to freedom, all being recaptured later.
Jiggs Lottiner, Cleveland gunman, singlehand of the other break, was credited by prison officials with being the leader also of the new attempt to escape.

Made because women have a need for lovely things

... BECAUSE youth needs gay, lovely, youthful things! Because it's natural and right for all women of any age to want to be youthful.

For these two reasons we've made Camay, the luxurious new toilet soap.

We saw how modern youth loves to surround itself with beauty. Fascinating, dainty, intimate things whose very possession heightens youth's charm.

We know how all women, of any age, love personal exquisiteness. And why not? Don't exquisite, personal things—gossamer stockings, rose-petal frocks, posies on your shoulders, all the little foolish, pretty things—give you the grace and charm the world demands of women?

Women have always turned to them for loveliness! When archaeologists opened the tomb of Queen Tais of Egypt who reigned 1500 B. C.—even before Tut-Ankh-Amen!—they found just such graceful trifles. Necklaces and rings of gold, silver and bronze—the ivory handles of a fan.

Camay is another of these charming personal things.

A soap made from precious essences of the world's finest oils—the pure, aristocratically hard, perfect soap that the beauty-loving modern girl requires! A soap made subtly fine to meet the craving for luxury natural to every woman, no matter what her age!

Camay. Perfected for the roseleaf skin of youth

Dip the smooth white bit of loveliness in lukewarm water—hard or soft, it makes no difference. See how buoyantly Camay foams up—feel what refreshing lather!—lather that's fleecy soft, that seems fairly to caress your skin.

Pour it over your hands and wrists—with your finger tips smooth it gently all over your face. Now rinse away the fragrant suds—swiftly, easily. Supple, glowing, youthful— isn't that the way your skin feels?

A fragrance dewy-fresh, elusive....

You will enjoy Camay's fragrance—you who adore exquisite perfumes. An aroma dewy-fresh, elusive, sweet as Youth itself!

And its velvet smoothness of texture—its alabaster whiteness! Just large enough for your slim fingers to handle, it looks its quality. It looks like the pure perfect soap you would choose for your very own.

Camay makes you feel lovelier— younger

In short, Camay ministers to that inner sense of charm that makes you more charming... like your trailing negligees of lace, the perfume you've chosen with such special care because it just expresses you!

You will want to try Camay right away, it's so lovely. Ask your druggist or your department store for it, or let your grocer pick out Camay's dainty wrapper on his special shelf of fine toilet soaps. Camay is 10 cents a cake, far less than you'd expect to pay for a luxury soap of such subtle charm.

Don't exquisite personal things—gossamer stockings, rose-petal frocks, perfumes, a lovely soap like Camay—give you the grace and charm the world demands of women?

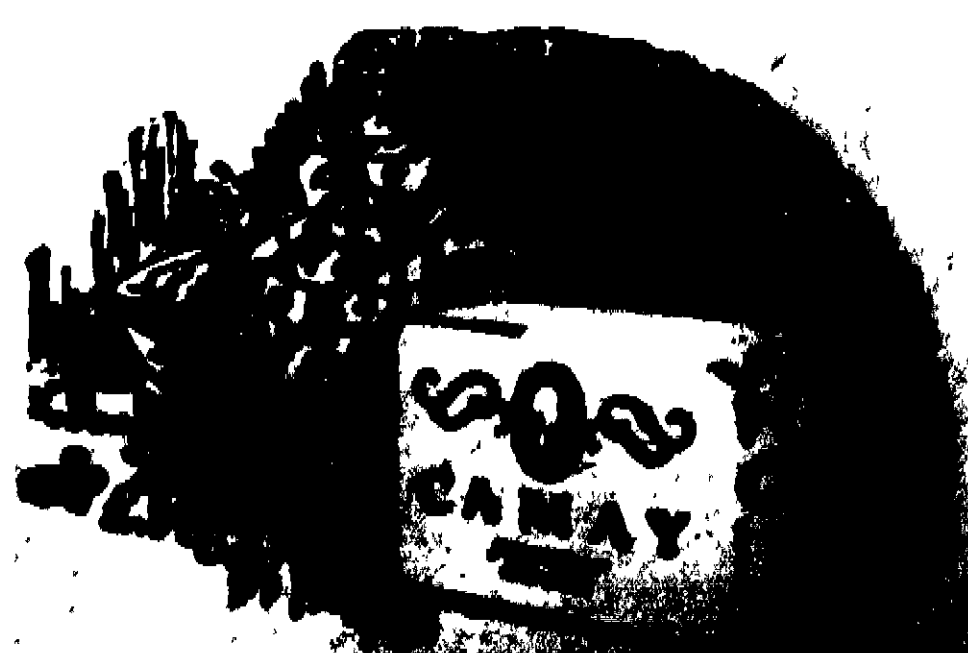

Modern youth loves to surround itself with beautiful, fascinating, dainty things that heighten youth's charm.

What is CAMAY?

... THE makers of Camay have produced far more fine soap than any other soap makers in America. In Camay they planned to offer you the finest possible fragrant soap. How should they make it?

From every continent except Australia they gather the choicest oils. By delicate processes they combine them with the finest most complete soap-making experience, they extract the essence of these oils. Essence that cannot be bought—this soap only be extracted. These pure essences are then blended to make Camay.

THE MARION STAR

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

The man who had gone forward to the Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan and returned and spoke a low word to the sheikh, whereupon the latter turned to Larry.

"The sheikh orders you brought immediately to his presence, filthy one; look well that he knows you, else it is my mind that the morning's sun will see a crucifixion outside the walls of the Temple," and with the words he pointed ahead. Helplessly, his hands closing in on either side of him, Larry moved forward.

Now came another long march through the ranks of armed men, then he was halted before a group of burrowed figures beside the road, none of whom he recognized. But one of them he picked out in his mind as the Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan, basing his judgment on the man's rich raiment and on his haughty bearing. He kept his eyes fixed on this one and was gratified to see the man step forward and bend a piercing gaze upon him.

Larry looked keenly for some sign that this was Omar ben Medjad, and felt his heart suddenly sink, as though it were a cockle shell beaded with ingots; there was no resemblance to Omar in this man whatever, save only in his stature and breadth of shoulders. He heard the other's voice.

"And so this is the fellow who says he is the body guard of the sheikh? As Allah lives, he lies. He is assuredly an impostor and like as not a spy of the infidel dogs or the Marabout Group, come from the north."

Larry saw the sheikh's right hand rise suddenly to his neck and sensed that the man was bending toward him. Close at hand a torch flickered brightly, steady of flame, now that the wind had died out. He saw the sheikh tug at his burnouse and as his neck bared ever so little. He glimpsed fleetingly a tiny, livid scar on Sheikh el-Hassan's throat! He heard him speaking again:

"I look at this fellow closely, yet I find he is not one that I know. He is a wanderer who has followed the Forbidden Road south, seeking the Temple. Tell me, spawn of filth, have you perchance seen a wizard along the way accompanied by a youth fair of face and of graceful form? Have you, perhaps, seen Youssef el-Habibani, and his assistant, Allal Abdi?"

Larry felt that Omar was trying to convey to him some sort of a message. The pseudo sheikh had drawn his burnouse back around his neck, but the American, having glimpsed that tiny livid scar, had been right and this was, indeed, Omar ben Medjad in yet another guise. The man was literally amazing by reason of his swift and always successful changes. Sometime, Larry vowed silently, when this was all ended, if it were ended and he survived, he would compel Omar to tell him the secret of his success, else he'd throttle him to death.

At least he'd be tempted to throttle him, said that his lore for the man was so great.

Feeling, then, that Omar was trying to tell him something, he grasped the arm of the man. To what end, he could not say, but he trusted Omar and was willing, eye, eager, to follow the other's lead. If it meant getting him into the Temple, then he was more than ready to follow any trail of thought the other opened up.

"I saw them, Sheikh el-Hassan, even as you have wondered, I saw the wizard rending the future to a holy man in a hut in a flower-filled clearing, and while he read I saw as in a dream that some one stole into the hut and intrigued the youth away, so that the wizard was sure of an impostor and like as not a spy of the infidel dogs or the Marabout Group, come from the north."

"And, impostor, did you also come across one who may have told you the youth Allal Abdi was taken to the Temple, that he might remain until the wizard came seeking? Did you hear from any tongue that Allal Abdi lies beyond the Gate of the Dazzlers, through which none but a true believer may pass and live, awaiting the coming of the mouloud? Heard you these things?"

"I heard only from a passing hermit that one had given him a message to deliver to the wizard, and he asked me if I saw the wizard to repeat to him these words 'Your road still lies south and Allal Abdi awaits in the Temple.' But moulou, who am I that a wizard of the renown of Youssef el-Habibani should come my way? I had no chance to tell him the message I was given."

He saw the sheikh's eyes twinkle briefly and knew he had played his part correctly; knew that Omar had been striving to learn if his message had been delivered. Now, the sheikh turned to his waiting companions:

"This man is, indeed, an impostor, yet verily I do not believe him an unbeliever."

"Judgment, judgment, Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan," a dozen voices cried.

The sheikh turned again to Larry and his glance was heavy with an unspoken message as he turned his eyes on the American. It was as though he were bidding him to accept the judgment about to be pronounced. Sensing the import of the unspoken words, Larry said:

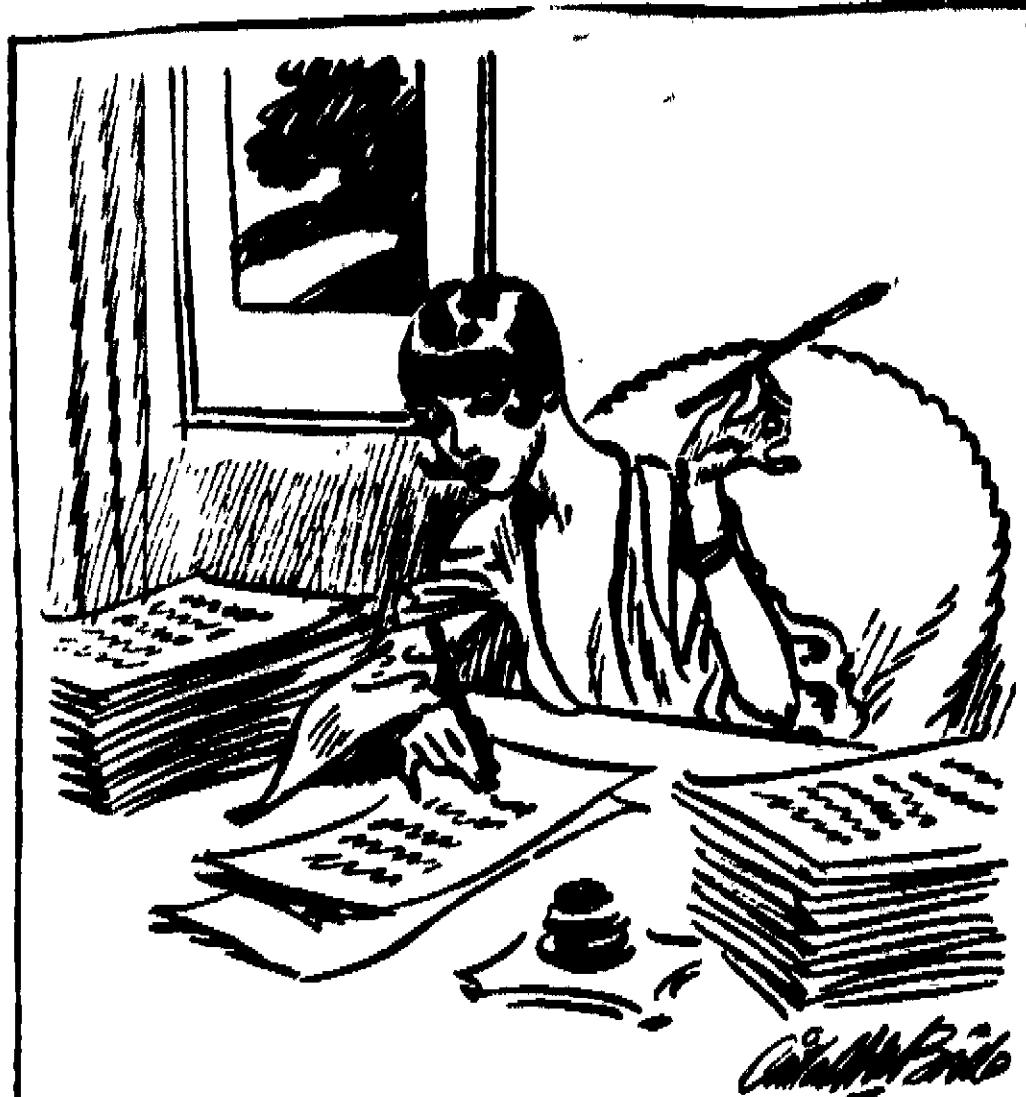

"Aye, judge me, Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan, that I may know my fate. The moulou will judge me justly, and my punishment shall be accepted meekly."

There was relief in the sheikh's glance now. Once more he turned to his companions:

"It is in my mind that this is not a spy, but he is an impostor, therefore merits punishment. He shall, for that reason, face the daggers, and if he passes them unscathed, then will he be purged, truly will he be literally turned into a wizard and not a fighting man; if he shall pass unscathed by the long knives, then he shall be cleansed in the sight of Allah and go free. That is my judgment, and only the marabouts can change it. Take him, therefore, to the Gate of the Dazzlers."

Now, a mighty shout went up and the judgment of the Sheikh el-Hassan was approved generally. Larry's quick wit caught a hidden import in the verdict; took the words of the sheikh as a message that he would safely pass through whatever ordeal lay ahead, and that once he had passed it, he was again to become a wizard. He wondered if he could reveal to the sheikh without making it plain to the others that he was delivering a message, that he understood. He decided to chance it.

"Your judgment is just, Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan, and I vow that if I pass the judgment of the Gate of the Dazzlers unscathed, I shall become a wizard, for I have somewhat of cunning in the art, and have studied much along that line."

He saw the other throw a quick, warning glance at him, then raise his hand.

"It is well," said the Sheikh Tahar el-Hassan, "I shall with him to the Gate of the Dazzlers."

Somewhere, Larry heard a gleam of light, then a muffled sound. At the same time the beacon on the peak sprang to life and sent its blood-red beam across the valley. Larry, looking up at it, was surprised that it seemed so near. It was almost as though it hung up in the air above him. He had not realized he had climbed so high, nor walked so far. And he saw something else—something which until now had escaped his vision.

For the road had turned downward, and straight ahead, couched in a cup in the hills, was a low white wall and back of it, gleaming white and standing out like the spires and turrets of a fairy city, were the high minarets and towers of a temple. Lights gleamed about it and moving figures were on the wall.

The Temple of Doom!

Without a doubt, he had reached it, and now, as his eyes drank in the sight, he felt his heart swell in high resolve and hot purpose, for somewhere beyond these walls lay Henna, perhaps in a dungeon, awaiting his coming. Eagerly he made ready for the test of the Gate of the Dazzlers; warmly he welcomed it, if only it meant in the end that he would reach the side of the woman he loved—this fiercer maid of the pure heart and virgin lips, who awayed his emotions as a strong wind bends a poppy blossom.

The beam of the eye on the peak sent a soft crimson flood across the white stones of the wall and the temple giving it an ethereal touch, softening its curve and angle until it seemed literally a fairy palace, built by goblins. He found the way leading directly to a dark spot in the middle of the broad, low wall. He started to lift his hand, the one which held the ring, and let it reflect back that brazen beam from the sky, then felt his wrist clutched tightly, and a gentle pressure exerted on his fingers, closing them over the set.

He looked aside and saw the Sheikh el-Hassan beside him. Immediately he sensed that he was not to reveal the ring; at least, not at this time.

His captors stopped and he looked straight ahead at a gate in the wall, built of argan fir, therefore very strong probably very thick. This it was that had formed that dark blot on the whiteness of the wall when he had first visioned it from up the mountain. He waited calmly, wondering what was to ensue. He heard the sheikh's voice:

"Without his rifle and without his sword, the impostor will enter the Gate of the Dazzlers. Look ye, O Moslem, on the gate, for when it closes behind this man we neither shall see him not again, or when next he appears he will be a mighty wizard. Perhaps, if he would but say, he is Youssef el-Habibani himself. If that be true, then his cunning will outwit the daggers, for when they close in and seek to clash against him, he will not be there, but will have leaped forward or will have dropped, so that their points will graze him perhaps, but never curve his skin. Now, patience, until the keepers of the gate are ready and open it for his admission. I have already sent a messenger ahead to apprise the marabouts that one is come to judgment."

Silently, the cavalcade stood, Larry muttered, his lips unconsciously falling into English:

"Oh, lord, why can't Omar tell me what I should do?"

But, silent, he heard a whisper at his ear—also in English:

"Flee the daggers and contrive to resume your role of the wizard. Be guided inside the temple by whatever occurs. I shall be inside myself ere long; perhaps, if they toss you in a dungeon, I shall be your jailer tomorrow. Courage, now, for the gate opens."

It had been the sheikh's voice, and now Larry saw the gate before him open and a yawning chasm swing wide to receive him. He felt hands push him forward, found himself in sudden, blinding darkness; heard a crash behind him and knew that the argan fir gates had been closed. He was a prisoner in the Gate of the Dazzlers!

Standing quietly, he waited. He wondered if he should advance, cautiously or boldly, or if he should remain where he was. Curse it! Why was there no light? Even a dim, flickering candle would have helped.

Suddenly, his eyes were shocked by a strong light that glared directly in them and from somewhere ahead he visioned a score of lamps, with a brilliant, highly burnished reflector behind them, throwing a terrific strength of their glow directly at him. Also, he visioned something else—something that made his blood run cold on the instant!

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

BY ABRAHAM GARRISON

THAT Philip Verizen was piqued was plainly to be seen. I hastened to make the amends which really were due him for my delay in answering his query concerning Harry Underwood.

"I am so sorry," I said contritely. "I was unaccountably rude. Your question was perfectly right and I am ready to answer it. I delayed only because the query brought a rush of memories and speculations to me which made me forget my manners. Please forgive me!"

He leaned toward me, smiling quizzically, yet with that queer, elusive spark of flame far back in his eyes.

"I wonder if you know how delightfully intriguing you are when you are penitent," he said. "I do hope you will be extremely rude to me some time, so that I may see you in a really contrite mood."

"I am afraid you would be disappointed," I said, returning the smile, but investing my answer with a determined little note which I hoped he would recognize. "If I ever have occasion to be extremely rude to anyone I rarely am penitent. But all this is beside the question which you asked me. I do wish to answer it more satisfactorily, but I can tell you only that I have not seen Harry Underwood for several years and have no idea where he is."

"I understood that he had dropped out of sight," Mr. Verizen said thoughtfully. "I am sorry. He was a bizarre sort of chap, but I liked him immensely. Now, remember, you agreed to stop me if my questions were annoying or embarrassing to you. I should like to know this! Does Mr. Underwood know where he is?"

"I am sure she doesn't," I said, remembering a little speech of Lillian to the effect that she did not know whether Harry were dead or alive.

Mr. Verizen tapped the fingers of his right hand upon the back of his left, a gesture which I had learned spelled indecision.

"What I know," he said at last, with a note in his voice curiously like that of a petulant child, bedeviled at some puzzle he cannot solve. "But unless my experience and dramatic judgment have failed me, he is very much alive and in this country."

I looked at him with the astonishment I felt at his statement.

"Perhaps you knew," he said, "that Underwood was a clever play tinker, whose services were in demand. I nodded, and he went on hurriedly: 'What but few people knew, however, was that underneath his flippancy and his indolence was concealed one of the finest dramatic minds of the country, coupled with a most unusual knowledge of the theatre from its earliest exemplification down to the present day.' 'I have seen his library,' I said, with the remembrance of a day when Lillian had shown me her husband's room lined with bookshelves whose every inch of space was taken up with rare manuscripts and books dealing with the drama.

"If you spent any time in it you know something of what I am trying to tell you," he returned. "But something which perhaps I alone know was that he had written several dramatic fragments which in sheer beauty and originality of treatment went far beyond anything that I ever have seen. He professed to have great respect for my judgment, and he brought them to me for my criticism. I was frankly enthusiastic and would have given them a production, but he was too 'home lazy,' as an old friend of mine used to say, ever to finish them. But just before I left for Europe on this last trip of mine there was delivered to me in a mysterious and theatrical manner, cunningly calculated to arouse my attention, the manuscript of a play purporting to be the work of a young and unknown writer. But it is part of my training and a necessity of self protection to be able to recognize the touch and style of a writer once I have seen it. And I had not read many lines of the manuscript before I recognized unmistakably the hand of Harry Underwood."

ONE OF the most critical periods of a woman's life comes between 45 and 50. Most women dread the approach of middle-age because they know, only too well, the depressing ailments it brings.

The best preparation for this period a woman can have is a good physical condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help her to gain strength and energy. It builds up the appetite and induces natural sleep. The following letters were written by women of middle-age.

MRS. BOLLERMAN'S CASE

West Hoboken, N.J.:—"I was troubled with headaches, weakness, dizziness, loss of appetite. I would often get so weak I could hardly stand. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel stronger and could do better and had fewer headaches. I am a well woman today, and feel like a different person. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letter sent to me. Mrs. Adah B. CARDS DEFEAT CUBS; PIRATES LOSE TO REDS

Yankees Win Two More; Cards Take Second Place in National

NEW YORK, June 22.—Although the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals have taken second place away from the Chicago Cubs by virtue of a double victory over the Bruins, their chances of winning the National League pennant are lessened today by the loss of the services of Tommy Thevenow, star shortstop. Thevenow fractured his ankle in sliding and it is feared he will be kept out of the game for the remainder of the season.

Joe Haines chalked up his seventh victory by winning the first game, 6 to 5, in a ding-dong contest which went 13 innings. The score was tied four times before Bell's single finally ended the agony. The nightcap was just a breeze for Flinn Rheim. The Cardinals winning 12 to 3 and advancing to within 2 1/2 games of Pittsburgh. Frisch collected seven hits and Webb hit his twelfth homer.

Reds Win

Pittsburgh's dream of easy pickings against the Reds while the Cubs and Cardinals were cutting each other's throats was rudely shattered when the Reds scored them in the tenth, 7 to 6, on Critz's single. Joe Dawson, starting his first game for Pittsburgh, was battered half way back to Louisville, while the Pirates tied the score in the ninth with a four run rally at Luque's expense.

Paul Waner's consecutive hitting streak was stopped in the 24th game but Clyde Barnhart, his sidekick in the Pittsburgh outfield, ran his string to 21 straight games.

Why the Boston Braves were willing to trade Zach Taylor was made evident when Jim Hogan, Taylor's youthful successor, made four hits, including two homers, against the Giants. They were the first homers made by the husky Boston catcher in the big league and the second one enabled the Braves to beat the Giants in the tenth, 7 to 5. For the Giants Mueller and Roush each made four hits including a homer.

Danny Vance fanned nine men as Brooklyn plastered the Phillies, 7 to 3, and advanced to within two games of the Giants. Cy Williams walloped his twelfth homer.

Yankees Win Two

A runaway race similar to last year's was forecast in the American League as the Yankees, with Pennock and Hoyt on the mound, two-timed the

WITH only one favorite taking an event and two second choices, coming through for wins the Ohio Short Ship Circuit races got under way yesterday afternoon at Marion County Fairgrounds. A large crowd witnessed the opening day festivities. The races will continue through Friday.

Tramp Smug, driven by A. L. Walters of Canton, "doped" as a winner, lived up to all expectations and breezed across the finish line in front of the field in three straight heats, winning the 2:10 pace. His heat time was 2:09 3/4. A $800 purse was offered for the event.

Walter Axworthy, driven by O. H. Erskine, walked away from the highly touted Great Worthy in the 2:24 trot, the second event of the day, taking the race in straight heats. Great Worthy, first choice, finished second in three consecutive heats. The best time for the mile was 2:15 1/4. The purse for the event was $400.

Ex Rhea Wins

Ex Rhea, with Mallow up, noosed out all others in straight heats in the 2:20 pace, the third and final event of the day, while Al B, rated as first choice, finished ninth on two occasions after breaking while well up in front. The winner gave spectators a thrill in the second heat when, after trailing for three-quarters of the way, he suddenly moved. Pru Gratton out of the lead and sailed down the home stretch an easy winner.

Axworthy Leads

Walter Axworthy, under the skilled hand of Erskine, gave an exhibition of Red Hot 7 to 3 and 7 to 1, in what was advertised as a bargain bill. The Yanks now lead the White Sox by eight games. Gehrig contributed his 18th homer.

Walter Johnson failed again as the Senators lost to the Athletics, 5 to 4. Rube Walberg held the Nats to five hits in the nightcap.

The other clubs were idle.

Five Games Are Played In Two Sunday School Loops; Emanuel Lutherans Idle

Epworth No. 1 Defeats St. Mary's and Takes Possession of Second Place; Trinity Baptists Again Win; Wesley and Calvary Tied

CALVARY NO. 1 last night stepped into a tie with Wesley M. E. for place in the first Sunday School League when it trimmed the latter team, 7 to 3, in the final game of the first round. Each team has now won five and lost two.

Epworth No. 1 took full possession of second place when it downed St. Mary's, 5 to 1, and Forest Lawn finished the first round without a single victory when it met defeat at the hands of Central Christians. The Presbyterian-epworth Senior game was postponed because of wet grounds.

While the Emanuel Lutherans, leaders of the second Sunday School League, were idle as the result of wet grounds, Trinity Baptists trimmed the sinking Calvary No. 2 team, 4 to 1, for their sixth victory of the season and Leest Presbyterians trounced United Brethren, 8 to 5. Other games were postponed because of wet grounds.

Calvary had little difficulty in cleaning up on the league leaders. While Gruber allowed only four hits, Calvary gathered seven. Each team made five errors. Bush pitched for Wesley.

With Wes Griffin pitching, Epworth No. 1 last night had little trouble in turning in a victory over St. Mary's. It was the fourth victory of the season. Epworth No. 1 has lost two games and has a postponed affair with Epworth Seniors to play off in the first round as a result of the decision made by the city recreational ball commission, Monday night, in giving back several of the protested and forfeited games of Epworth Seniors.

Forest Lawn has lost seven games and will start the second round next week without a victory to its credit. Its seventh defeat came last night at the hands of the Central Christians, who, with Bush on the mound, won by a score of 11 to 4.

Trinity Baptists finished the first round with only one defeat in the second Sunday School League, winning the final game last night from Calvary No. 2. Stewart Jones pitched for the Baptists with Clise on the slab for the Calvary nine.

Leest Presbyterians kept the trail hot by defeating United Brethren, 8 to 5, for the fifth victory of the season. They are in third place as the first round closes.

FOUR EVENTS AGAIN BOOKED FOR THURSDAY

Third Day of Marion Races Promises Several Thrillers

FOUR more events are scheduled for Thursday, the third day of the Marion Short Ship Circuit race meet. They are the 2:00 trot, 2:16 trot, 2:24 pace and 2:15 pace.

Seven horses are entered in the 2:00 trot, one of the fastest races of the meet, with all horses that placed in the money at Mansfield in the same event being on hand. Donald A., owned by G. Cartwell of Hanover, O., won the 2:00 trot at Mansfield with Kentucky Todd, from Vic Fleming's stables, running second in three consecutive heats. Victor Frisco is among the favorites for the 2:16 trot. He finished first in that event in three straight heats at Mansfield last week and, if going right, is more than likely to duplicate the feat.

Little Raven

Little Raven, owned by T. S. Brittain of Hillsboro, O., pulled the surprise of the Mansfield meet when she breezed under the wire three times for a first in the 2:18 pace. She will be seen on the local track in the 2:24 pace, and, according to a number of followers of the sport, has an excellent chance to finish first in that event.

Capt. Volo, owned by C. A. Valentine, Columbus, is booked as a favorite in the last race of the day, the 2:15 pace. He took the 2:14 pace at Mansfield in three consecutive heats. Barnes Tramp from Elyria, O., also is rated well by those familiar with the situation.

The races will come to a close Friday afternoon with three events.

COUNSEL FOR FREDERICK
RESUMES MURDER CASE

Accused Slayer Says He Shot
Warren Man in Self-Defense

Cleveland, June 22.—Defense counsel for Ernest Frederick, charged with killing Walter Holcomb, in the postoffice at Warren, O., today resumed its case in federal court here.
The government rested late yesterday afternoon, following introduction of witnesses who testified that Frederick had been "gunned" by Holcomb several days before the killing. Frederick accused Holcomb of being "too friendly" with his wife, according to these witnesses.
When the pair met in the Warren postoffice last Feb. 28, Frederick pulled two pistols, firing at Holcomb until overpowered.
Frederick himself took the stand shortly before court adjourned yesterday and testified he shot in self-defense, fearing Holcomb was about to shoot him.
The defense will seek to show today that the accused was mentally deranged and not responsible for his acts. The government is expected to introduce several alienists in rebuttal testimony, to show that Frederick was sane.

NEW YORKERS LEAD

Tip All Others in Ohio State Tennis
Tourney at Cleveland

Cleveland, June 22.—The third day of the Ohio State Tennis tourney, in progress here, found Louis Dailley and Frank Shields, New Yorkers, topping all singles entrants, with either of the pair in position to put up a strong battle for the championship. Shields was the first player in the tourney to reach the quarter finals. He defeated H. Place, Chicago, 6-1; 6-1 while Dailley was eliminating Bob Place, Chicago, 6-0; 6-2. The youthful easterners failed to show much in their first doubles try however.
Three Cincinnatians, S. Myers, Archie McCullum and R. Felix, were in the win column today as a result of their individual victories. Each of this trio looks threatening as does Bob Bradley, Toledo star, who won from two opponents, R. Demaree, and R. W. Wetly, of Akron, respectively.

FINAL PRACTICE
New London, Conn., June 22.—The Yale and Harvard crews will take their final practice runs today in preparation for their annual Regatta race on the Thames Friday. Rough water caused postponement of several other trials last night.

MAJORITY OF STOCKS
IN MODERATE ADVANCE

New Favorites Discovered in Railroad and Industrial Lists

MARKETS AT A GLANCE:
Railroad stocks irregular; industrial stocks irregular; domestic bonds inactive; foreign bonds steady; call money + per cent; grain irregular; copper steady; oil reactionary; cotton irregular; rubber fairly steady; sugar firm; foreign exchange firm.

New York, June 22.—Continuance of the easier money situation and professional activities on the floor of the stock exchange were the most important factors in the moderate advance of the majority of active stocks today. New favorites in both the railroad and industrial lists were discovered, and to them was shifted the burden of keeping the pot boiling for the powerful bullish forces in and out of Wall Street.
Most of the speculative leaders here have discarded the weekly report on brokers' loans as either a factor in the market, or a barometer of market conditions. With the large increase in bond financing, the position is now taken that a decreasing volume of brokers' loans would be a bullish instead of a bearish factor, since it would signalize the withdrawal of speculators from the market.
New price gains of a few of the railroad speculative stocks reflected active buying of the shares by transportation interests. Minneapolis, St. Paul & North St. Marie (St. Louis) jumped five points, while Western Pacific sold up about six points on buying attributed to Arthur Curtiss James, who is already in control of the road. Slightly higher prices were quoted for the Nickel Plate and the southwestern-merger stocks.

OUTSIDE RUBBER MARKETS
New York, June 22.—In the outside market for crude rubber futures here today, prices were almost impossible to quote, according to one house which placed the spot rubber smoked sheets at 35 cents nominal, July-Sept. 35 1/2 cents nominal; Oct.-Dec. 35 1/2 cents bid and 36 1/2 cents offered. These levels are unchanged from the previous close.

COFFEE FUTURES
New York, June 22.—The coffee futures market opened steady today. Initial prices were from five points lower to two points higher than last night's closing levels. July opened at 12.72, up 02; September 12.08, down 02 and December 11.74, down 04.
